WHEREAS NCTC and MNU are linked by common academic and national interests in social sciences, socio-politics, extremist and violent extremist ideologies, strategic studies, and peace and security issues.

WHEREAS NCTC and MNU wish to enable cooperation and exchange in the areas of research in socio-politics, extremist and violent extremist ideologies, strategic studies, and peace and security issues.

WHEREAS NCTC and MNU wish to expand the basis of academic inquiry, research and publication.

NOW THEREFORE, NCTC and MNU, as Parties to this Memorandum of Understanding, set forth the following:

ARTICLE I

1.1 Background

The contemporary security environment is characterized by uncertainty, rapid changes, and volatility. Non-traditional and asymmetric threats such as terrorism and violent extremism, organized and transnational crimes, environmental issues and competition for scarce resources, driven by a host of socio-economic and demographic factors rank as high as traditional security concerns such as inter-state conflicts and the security of the states.

Given the diverse nature of the threats in the current security ecosystems, we can no longer solely expect the law enforcement and security agencies to address and counter them. Policies to address these challenges must adopt a multi-sectoral and cross-cutting approach, incorporating the governmental and non-governmental stakeholders, including academia. Academia's involvement is especially important to facilitate sound evidence-based policies and decisions, and thorough analysis of the issues.

It is with this intent that the NCTC is seeking to establish research affiliations with MNU. MNU has been recognized as the leader in education and research, particularly focused on some of the most contentious social issues. In addition, this affiliation would enable both Parties to conduct research to analyze, understand and effectively address issues concerning extremism and violence.

This MOU reflects the Parties' sincere and genuine intentions to collaborate in the areas of inquiry, research and publication outlined above. The purpose of this MOU is to advance the collaborative ideas and objective of the Parties as they relate to the research areas mentioned and enable each of the Parties to pursue the research and publication activities and tasks outlined in Article II of this MOU.

The research findings of such joint research will be published after consultation with both Parties. Both Parties reserve the right to withhold information relevant to National Security from being published.

2.2.2 Peace and Security Module

NCTC shall deliver the Peace and Security Module incorporated into the relevant academic program at MNU when deemed necessary.
